

Is Protocol 18 "Arrest of Opponents" from the Learned Elders of Zion Being Implemented Today?

Sixbert SANGWA • July 25, 2024

In our current global landscape, where political upheavals, social unrest, and the erosion of personal freedoms are increasingly prevalent, understanding the sinister strategies that have been at play for centuries is crucial. Protocol 18, titled "Arrest of Opponents," from the Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion, provides a chilling blueprint for control through fear, deception, and manipulation. This document, often linked with the Illuminati and other secret organizations, reveals a plan to dominate the world by subverting morals, orchestrating chaos, and establishing a tyrannical global governance system under the rule of Lucifer/Antichrist. As Christians, it is imperative to be aware of these machinations, remain vigilant, and resist being ensnared by their deceit.

Simulation of Disorders and Manipulation

The first provision of Protocol 18 outlines the tactic of simulating disorders to justify stringent measures and surveillance. The protocol states:

"We shall arrange a simulation of disorders or some manifestation of discontents finding expression through the co-operation of good speakers... This will give us the pretext for domiciliary prerequisites and surveillance on the part of our servants from among the number of the GOYIM police."

Historically, this tactic has been employed to great effect. Consider the Reichstag Fire of 1933, a pivotal event in Nazi Germany. The fire was used by Hitler to justify the Reichstag Fire Decree, which suspended civil liberties and allowed for the arrest of political opponents under the guise of national security. Similarly, the post-9/11 era has seen the implementation of extensive surveillance programs and the erosion of personal freedoms worldwide, justified by the need to combat terrorism.

Recent trends also reflect this strategy. For instance, the COVID-19 pandemic has led to unprecedented levels of government surveillance and control measures in many countries, purportedly to contain the virus. These measures include extensive contact tracing, mandatory health checks, and restrictions on movement, which have raised concerns about privacy and personal freedoms.

Moreover, there is a growing belief that the COVID-19 response served as a pilot to acclimate the public to future surveillance and control measures. The pandemic has familiarized people with the idea of mandatory health checks and digital health passports, setting the stage for more invasive technologies. It is believed that these measures could eventually lead to the implantation of microchips under the guise of vaccines and medications. These microchips would provide the group with full control over humans through technology, enabling them to monitor and manipulate individuals on an unprecedented scale. These examples illustrate how the tactic of creating or exaggerating threats continues to be used to consolidate power and control populations.

Infiltration and Surveillance

Another element of Protocol 18 involves the infiltration of opposition groups to monitor and ultimately neutralize them:

"Until they commit some overt act we shall not lay a finger on them but only introduce into their midst observation elements."

This approach mirrors the tactics used by various regimes to infiltrate dissident movements. By planting informants within these groups, the authorities could preemptively counteract potential threats, often leading to arrests and harassment of activists without substantial evidence of wrongdoing. In recent years, these tactics have been observed within various social and political movements worldwide. Governments have been reported to deploy undercover agents to monitor and disrupt protests. These infiltrations aim to gather intelligence, spread misinformation, and create internal conflicts within the movements, thereby weakening their effectiveness and stifling dissent.

Moreover, these clandestine groups extend their influence beyond political movements by strategically placing agents across various social, economic, and religious structures. In social structures, agents infiltrate community organizations, activist groups, and social media platforms to steer public opinion, suppress dissent, and identify key influencers. Their goal is to control narratives and discourage collective action against the status quo.

In economic structures, agents embed themselves in major corporations and financial institutions. They manipulate markets, create economic dependencies, and ensure that wealth remains concentrated in the hands of a few. This economic control is crucial for maintaining power and suppressing potential economic threats. In political structures, agents within political parties, government agencies, and international organizations work to influence policy decisions, rig elections, and suppress opposing opinions. They consolidate political power and swiftly neutralize emerging leaders who oppose their agenda. In religious structures, agents infiltrate institutions to manipulate spiritual leaders and doctrines, creating divisions and disillusionment among followers. By controlling religious narratives, they undermine the moral and ethical foundations of society, making populations more susceptible to their influence. These multifaceted infiltrations illustrate how the secret group strategically places agents to control various aspects of society, ensuring their agenda is advanced and opposition is neutralized.

Government by Fear

The protocol emphasizes maintaining an appearance of benevolence while ruling through fear:

"According to strictly enforced outward appearances our ruler will employ his power only for the advantage of the nation... his authority will be respected and guarded by the subjects themselves... OVERT DEFENSE OF THE KIND ARGUES WEAKNESS IN THE ORGANIZATION OF HIS STRENGTH."

This method is observed in authoritarian regimes where leaders project an image of working for the common good while using fear tactics to maintain control. They present themselves as benevolent, implementing policies that seem beneficial, but behind this facade, they employ purges and surveillance to eliminate threats. This dual approach helps maintain legitimacy while suppressing opposition.

In contemporary times, this tactic is used by leaders of major nations and corporations. They promote appealing initiatives that contradict biblical principles or have ulterior motives. For example, some leaders advocate for policies that seem to advance social justice and sustainability but concentrate power and undermine freedoms. Corporations may champion philanthropy while engaging in exploitative practices. By appearing benevolent, they push measures serving their interests at the expense of societal well-being.

The ruler, often identified as the Antichrist in biblical terms, will present himself as a savior, promising peace and prosperity. However, his true agenda will be deception and domination. He will use his benevolent appearance to gain trust while secretly consolidating power and control. This ruler will employ surveillance technologies, manipulate economies, and suppress dissent to establish his reign. Apostle Paul also warned in 2 Thessalonians 2:9-10 about the coming of the lawless one, who would use all kinds of counterfeit miracles, signs, and wonders to deceive those who are perishing.

Ruthless Suppression

Protocol 18 advocates for the immediate arrest of individuals on mere suspicion to prevent any possibility of organized resistance:

"Criminals with us will be arrested at the first, more or less, well-grounded suspicion... in these matters we shall be literally merciless."

This principle is evident in the draconian laws and practices of many totalitarian states. The notorious "Night of the Long Knives" in 1934, where Hitler ordered the purge of potential rivals within the Nazi Party, demonstrates this ruthless approach to eliminating opposition. More recently, countries with oppressive regimes have enacted laws allowing for the detention of individuals without trial based on vague suspicions of subversion or terrorism, thereby stifling dissent and reinforcing the regime's power. This approach is mirrored in contemporary policies like "pre-crime" measures, where individuals are arrested based on the suspicion of future criminal activity. This is seen in many countries which aim to preempt terrorist activities by monitoring communications.

Conclusion

The sinister plan detailed in Protocol 18 of the Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion highlights the use of fear, manipulation, and ruthless suppression to control populations and eliminate opposition. Historical events and current trends illustrate the implementation of these strategies, revealing a concerted effort to dominate and subjugate. As Christians, it is vital to remain aware of these schemes, rooted in spiritual warfare, and to stand firm in faith, guided by the truth of God's Word. By doing so, we can resist the deception and maintain our integrity in the face of these pervasive threats.
